POINTING BEYOND THE OBVIOUS

The Sports Personality of the Year has broken with tradition and decided to award a prize for someone who has won no sporting achievement. The award goes to the best back-room person, the best supporting act. So technically it could go to a caddie, to someone who paints the lines on the pitch, someone who drives the swimmers to the pool or someone who washes the kit. It's good to recognise that it's OK to be Number Two. That's because these people all make it possible for their friends to be Number One.

John the Baptist would have been in the reckoning for this year's award. The whole purpose of his life was to play second fiddle to his cousin, Jesus. His preaching and his ministry pointed to someone whose shoes he wasn't even worthy to undo. He was a witness to someone greater than himself. Yet his own work prepared the way for the Lamb of God.

John the Baptist knew who he wasn't. He made it clear that he was not the Messiah. He also knew who he was. When they asked him who he was he could have built himself up: a great prophet, a wonder-preacher etc. But he simply said that he was a voice. Voices come and go, and some of them are never heard. Jesus is described as the "Word", the "message" of God that has existed from all eternity the fullness of God's plan for humanity. But John says he is simply a passing voice that points to the "Word".

In the run-up to Christmas we are challenged as Christians. And our challenge is to be the voice of our time that points to something and someone that the world might not see. We are called to be witnesses to Jesus Christ, the Son of God. And in particular we are called to bear witness to the fact that behind all the shallow glossiness of the season and the one-dimensional celebration of indulgence there lies a reality that shocks some and thrills others: our God has taken flesh and become one of us so that he might teach us how to be like him. This is what we prepare for during Advent and celebrate at Christmas. And while we do so we point beyond the obvious to someone and something that only faith can see.

ANNUAL COLLECTION FOR ST VINCENT DE PAUL THIS WEEKEND 12TH & 13TH DECEMBER

SVP will be conducting our Giving Sunday collection on Sunday 13th December. Our Conferences visit many families and people in need across communities in Ireland.

The funds raised will be spent in the local community helping those who need it most with food, heating and education costs throughout the winter and beyond. SVP rely almost entirely on the support of generous parishioners.

You can also donate directly to our Conferences at svp.ie donate or calling 0818 176 176.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your very generous support throughout the years.
